The novel takes place at the fictional Beckford College, a private school for boys. The action begins with the arrival at the school of a mischievous young boy called Farnie, who turns out to be the uncle of the older "Bishop" Gethryn, a prefect, cricketer, and popular figure in the school. His arrival, along with that of another youngster who becomes a servant to Gethryn, leads to much excitement and scandal in the school, and the disruption of some important cricket matches.

School Sports

By Phyllis Hirshleifer

This is an early novel which will appeal to readers who are familiar with British school sports more than to the ordinary American reader. Wodehouse's comic genius and his understanding of human character are evident, but the plot does not build to the kind of hilarious climax one finds in some of the later works.
